MOKENA CIVIC ASS'N CLOSES 2 EVENTFUL YEARS

The Mokena Civic Association has just closed two very eventful years of its history and at the meeting on Monday night held in the Immanuel Lutheran church parlors a resume of the accomplishments of the Association was outlined by Robert A. Bechstein, the outgoing president, in his farewell address. Mr. Bechstein gave the following address:

"Today marks the ending of another fiscal year for the Mokena Civic Association. In passing it may interest you to give you a resume of what the organization has accomplished during that period, all of which required your efforts, your thoughts, your discussions, with the best interests of the community always uppermost.

"The outstanding event of the year in all probability was the Home Coming and Fall Festival, which gave the community no little publicity and gathered more people into its fold at one time than it has seen in the 108 years of its existence. I firmly believe these events warrant their continuance for its results are best measured by the general expressions of good will and public approval. Out of town attendance inquiries and correspondence further justify this form of entertainment.

"We again sponsored the Memorial Day exercises, which showed larger attendance and more general interest and it now appears to be one of our civic duties to hold this function.

"We sponsored and held this community's first Public Forum, which was very interesting, well taken by the general public, with the request that we have more of these educational features. Another of these educational features was the motion picture show and lecture on counterfeit money by the U. S. Secret Service. This too, proved of general interest.

"We sponsored the first Citizenship Day program held in Frankfort Township. This too, was well attended with general approval. We thereby inducted and certified to those new citizens as having a part in our government.

"We secured from the United States Government an obsolete cannon and had it erected on a base in the Pioneer Memorial Cemetery as a memorial for unmarked soldiers graves. This is attracting considerable attention with favorable comment from both visitors and local residents.

New Lenox Files Petition For Fire District

A petition for the establishment of a fire district for all of New Lenox township was filed Wednesday in county court.

Judge Glen L. Cowing set Sept. 3, at 9 o'clock, standard time, as the date for the hearing at which time he will determine if the petition, signed by 110 persons is sufficient.

If the application is granted, the judge will rule on the boundaries, as requested, to include the entire township, and he will also fix a date for a referendum when all the voters of the township will cast ballots on whether the district shall be established as a fire district.

It appears likely that if the proposition carries, the apparatus which would be bought and maintained by a special tax, would be housed in New Lenox proper. It would be mainly manned by volunteers, as is the case with the Plainfield Department.

The petition was filed for the proponents of the district by Attorney J. Hinton Massey.

Mokena Robins Triumph 12-11

Last Sunday afternoon the Mokena Robins beat the fast St. John's Lutheran team of Joliet in a real softball thriller. After a bad first inning in which St. John's scored 7 runs, the Robins came down to earth with a batting attack which brought in one or two runs each inning until the score was tied.

Mokena's big moment came in the last half of the 7th, when with a man on second and the big crowd roaring encouragement, Bob Frisch climaxed a thrilling game with a slashing hit over 1st, bringing in the winning run. Score: Mokena 12, St. John's Lutheran 11.

Next Saturday night Robinson's Tavern, sponsors of the Mokena "Robins" will give a big party in honor of the team, and all the fans are invited to come and have a good time.

The Orland Park Baseball club won their second baseball Victory Sunday when they defeated the Chicago Heights Arrows by the score of 3-0. Emil Bormet, Orland's star twirler was on the mound and limited the strong Heights team to two scattered hits while striking out 11 men.

Bormet has pitched three games so far and has made a very impressive showing. He has allowed but 2 runs and only 9 hits in this time, and has sent 33 men back to the bench via the strikeout route. This is an average of 11 men per game.

The Orland attack Sunday was led by H. Uthe, Heiting and Kennedy with two hits each. The Orland Park team has looked better every game and if they keep on playing the brand of ball we have seen, you will find Orland right up on top as the season closes.

This Sunday, June 23, Orland will play the strong Evergreen Nine at Orland and this should prove to be another tough game for the Orland team.

So come on out and watch your home team try for their third league victory. Game will be called at 2:30. (Continued on Page 7)

Dole Debauches, Says Mormon Leader, So Church Sets Up Own Work Welfare

By

CLARENCE D. WILLIAMS

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"WE MORMONS have cared for the essential needs of our own since the struggling days of the 'forties' under the guiding hand of the great colonizer, Brigham Young."

So says 83-year-old Heber Jeddy Grant, president of the Mormon church. But he doesn't rest with talk, and that accounts for the huge Mormon church welfare plan to banish unemployment.

This plan, wholly divorced from politics, seeking and wanting no aid from any municipal, county, state or federal agency, is going to be a permanent plan to "help people help themselves," asserts the man who is prophet, seer, revelator, and leader of more than 800,000 faithful since 1918.

The project is based purely upon religious principles, assert its sponsors, which were laid down by the church a century ago.

Operate Coal Mine, Factories.

The plan, which materially reduces the total amount necessary for adequate relief in any given community, has been showing rapid results. There has been established in Salt Lake City a central bishop's storehouse, in addition there are 67 regional and state storehouses that serve approximately 100 of the 127 stakes and there are small emergency bishop's storehouses in the remote rural wards of the church.

The welfare plan operates a coal mine, a large canning factory in addition to smaller units scattered all over the church, a clothing factory, a clothing renovating shop and salvage plant, with several stores established to distribute their output, and two saw mills. One stake is undertaking an experimental soap manufacturing project and still another group is manufacturing ladders and another adobe for building homes.

Newest venture in the plan is the construction of 23 grain storage elevators having a total capacity of 350,000 bushels. At the present time a large crew of workmen, the majority of whom are devout church members, are working day and night pouring concrete in the giant forms. They will be paid in kind and will receive some cash. The grain elevators are located in Salt Lake City.

Ever since the planner, Brigham Young, drilled the necessity of hard work and thrift into his flock there has been more or less strict obedience to his commands.

Heads Many Businesses.

The life and character of Mr. Young, second leader of the church, unquestionably have inspired the five men, who since Brigham's death in 1877 have worn the mantle of president of the Mormon church.

Heber J. Grant, seventh president, is a native of Salt Lake City. He is tall, erect and still is a "powerhouse" despite his recent serious illness which forced him to refrain from his strenuous and untiring job of attending to even the smallest details of operating the church.

President Grant in addition to being titular head of the Mormon faith is head of many powerful Utah industrial and commercial organizations. They include factories, banks, hotels and insurance companies. In spite of all that keeps him "on the go" he keeps in close contact with the most humble members of his flock.

Keen-minded and witty Mr. Grant is a firm believer in work and more work.

"It keeps you young and maintains your pride," he asserts. He is dead set against such retirement plans as Townsend advocates.

"Why, it's the silliest thing I have ever heard," he said. "I certainly do not indorse such a pension plan for my members."

He stopped to figure out how much he would have received if the plan were effective when he was 65 years of age.

"Why, I would have received thousands of dollars. No sir, I urge at all times that church members give a full day's work for their full day's pay."

And he added: "I urge that they keep on working their life time, providing they are able."

Along with his right hand men, First Counselor J. Reuben Clark Jr. and Second Counselor David O. McKay, who make up what is termed the "first presidency," bearded President Grant quickly points out the church can care for its own in the future if it can be relieved of the debauchery to character which follows along with a dole.

In order to render moderate financial assistance to those who were engaged in small farming or business, and who did not have a bankable undertaking, the church set up the Co-operative Security corporation. This company has made a number of small loans, which are largely character loans, but has limited the amount it would lend to any one person to a few hundred dollars.

Finally, the church has not yet made any effort, or pretended to make any effort, to take its members from governmental work projects. Leaders say it has merely urged those on such projects to do a full day's work for a day's pay.

While the church welfare plan aims, of course, to help those in need, its real purpose is not merely to substitute church gratuities for others furnished by charitable or governmental agencies, but to rebuild the characters of its members and to promote and foster the patriotic, civic, and spiritual qualities of the people.

He Knew Poverty.

Heber Jeddy was born in 1856 in a pioneer house where the large Z. C. M. I. mercantile establishment now stands, nine years after Brigham Young had arrived in Utah with his band of pioneers fleeing from persecution in Missouri and Illinois.

When Heber was a growing boy the Mormons under President Young were beset by disease, famine and more persecution. Mr. Grant's father, Jedediah, was one of Young's leaders. His boy, Heber, grew up under conditions of poverty. He struggled hard to support his mother after the death of his father when he was at a tender age. He possessed the will to succeed with everything he undertook to do. He later built his mother a fine home when he was often branded as a failure. Meantime he exhibited a talent for business and weaved his pattern of life, without the aid of anyone except his mother, who constantly encouraged him to carry on under the ideals laid down by the L. D. S. church.

The churchman has many favorite sayings which he has recited to Latter-day Saints at various church conferences that are held in the historic oval-shaped tabernacle on famous Temple square.

One of his sayings is based on his "persist in doing" philosophy.

Praises Sense of Humor.

He asserts: "That which we persist in doing becomes easy to do; not that the nature of the thing has changed, but that our power to do has increased."

The Mormons, particularly those in the western states, have proved to be long-livers. Longevity is typical among the pioneer families in Utah.

Heber Grant, who will be 84 years of age next November 22, believes that age is a quality of mind. He often has repeated: "Age is a quality of mind; if your dreams you've left behind, if hope is cold, if you no longer look ahead, if your ambitions are dead, then you are growing old."

A humorist and a known philanthropist, President Grant has appeared at many leading conventions as a principal speaker, often "stealing the show."

"Without a sense of humor a person will fail to make friends," he declared. "And the more friends, the more you get out of life."

He warned that the "curse of idleness shortens a man's life." He said those who are near, or in the so-called "pension age" better think twice before they take a permanent rest.

Heber Jeddy Grant, 83, president of the Mormon church.

Mr. Grant has been a great organizer and devoted many of his early years to missionary work and was the first representative of the church to preside over a mission in Japan. He was only about 26 years of age when he was ordained a member of the council of twelve apostles.

No More Polygamy.

He was made president of the council of twelve apostles during the presidency of Joseph F. Smith and following President Smith's death in 1918 he was elevated to the top ranking position he now holds.

The once burning Mormon question—polygamy—has long been forever banished. Any person of the faith who attempts in any way to practice plural marriage is excommunicated from the church.

President Grant has had three wives and was the father of twelve children, two boys and ten girls. His sons and two of his wives are dead.

He has been quoted on the subject of polygamy as follows:

"Plural marriages have long been passe. Although they used to be in good form among members, today they are condemned. There are still some who attempt to practice it, but they suffer when they are discovered. Before the practice was forbidden it was different. Contrary to the propaganda spread by the enemies of the church, plural marriages as practiced by church members were not different from any other form of holy matrimony."

"The laws of the church were such that a man was required to get a written indorsement before he could enter into plural marriage, and he had to have an excellent character. Even when the practice was common, the number of such marriages was insignificant compared with the population."

Urges 'Words of Wisdom.'

The church president is constantly urging his flock to obey the teachings of the "Word of Wisdom." This prohibits the use of intoxicating liquors, tobacco and tea and coffee. In his entire career as president of the church, Mr. Grant has only been absent from two general church conferences in Salt Lake City. Both times he was forced to remain away on account of illness. Once he had to go to Chicago to undergo an operation and again he wasn't able to preside at the great gathering in April, 1940 when he was confined in a Los Angeles hospital.

The annual report of the church for 1939 shows a total church membership of 803,528. There are 645,618 in the states and 157,910 in the missions.

WASHINGTON. — The new tax measure is not just going to be the sort of lick and a promise which had been indicated earlier. It is going to be the result of considerable study and investigation on the part of the congressional tax experts. Just a 10 per cent flat addition is out the window. Senators and representatives interested directly in the tax situation pride themselves on their understanding of the problem and they are going to have something, they are saying, to which they can point with pride when the next revision comes up.

Then, too, the bill is not going to raise the mere seven hundred millions additional that President Roosevelt talked about. It is going to be nearer twice that, not improbably a billion and a half on top of the present tax load.

There are two reasons for this. One is that the amount of expenditures necessary for national defense has been constantly understated—underestimated if you like, but understated is more accurate. The point here is that plenty of people, including the President, the admirals, the generals, and the senior members of the senate and house military and naval committees, knew that the United States army and navy needed the spending of several billion dollars to bring them up to date.

AFRAID TO SPEAK

But—none of them thought the public would stand for it. From the President down, all were afraid politically of telling the country that we had to spend billions more on national defense. So there was virtually a conspiracy to let the fiscal situation, and the national defense situation, ride until after election.

It must be realized in this connection that the fiscal situation was already very bad. Even with terribly inadequate national defense spending, the government was headed directly for financial rocks. Every one who studied the situation knew that congress would have to impose additional taxes next session, and would have to raise the $45,000,000,000 debt limit also in the session to begin next January. But the President and the legislators figured on coasting until after the election was over.

Then came Norway and Denmark, with Holland and Belgium following, and the drive to the English channel on top of that. For the first time since Gettysburg there was real fear in this country as to whether this nation could go on being what it has been.

SLOW TO MAKE CHANGES

It is not so surprising to students of naval and military history that the navy suddenly discovers our battleships need better deck armor, as a protection from airplanes, and that the army is woefully deficient in mechanized units.

It is the history of army and navy staffs of most countries that they are very slow to admit that changes have revolutionized their own art. There is nothing new about this. It is a failure of human nature.

It is entirely probable that the tremendous supremacy which Germany has shown in the use of fighting machines in the present war is due to the fact that its army and navy have been under the absolute domination for some years now of an outsider—a fanatic who was only a corporal in the World war, but who achieved supreme power. In other words, it is the well-considered opinion of many students of military and naval history that this ruthless direction by a man who had never served in the various grades leading up to the high command was of inestimable advantage to the Nazis' military force.

The classic illustration, of course, of resistance to new ideas in the navy is found by studying the repercussions of the battle of the Merrimac and the Monitor, in our own Civil war.

TOOK A LONG TIME

There were three lessons to be learned from that battle, plus the easy victory the day before of the Merrimac over the wooden Union ships lying in Hampton Roads. One was that an iron ship, or an armored ship, was immeasurably superior to a wooden ship. The second was that for war purposes the screw propeller was greatly superior to the old-fashioned paddle wheels. The third was that a few large guns, in turrets directly over the keel, were far more deadly in their fire than a larger number of guns mounted along the sides of the ship. The Merrimac had a lot more guns than the Monitor, but they were mounted as though she was an old British frigate, to shoot through openings in her sides, broadside fashion.

Neither ship sank the other, but the Merrimac never put to sea again after her retreat that day.

His Downfall: Parlor Without a Pitchfork

HARRODSBURG, KY. — With the ground covered by ice and snow for more than a month, R. E. Cunningham, 71 years old, a farmer, took precautions when he went outdoors. He used a pitchfork for a walking stick, jabbing the prongs into the ground firmly to insure against a fall. Then he slipped on a hardwood floor in his home and fell, breaking a hip.

Heirloom Stolen In 1915 Returned

Recovery of Gem Is Due to Deathbed Confession.

SEATTLE. — An old-fashioned diamond, an heirloom, has been returned to its rightful family owner 25 years after it was stolen.

It was returned in a tiny box, wrapped in adhesive tape and tissue paper. The box also contained an unsigned letter by the thief's brother, telling sadly of a war veteran's deathbed confession.

The diamond ring was bought by T. Frank Ryan, when he was courtly after his first wife, Margaret. Shortly after her death in 1915, the thing was sent to a jewelry store in Long Beach for cleaning.

An employee replaced the diamond with a cheap white sapphire. He hoped to give it to his fiancée, the letter said, but she died and the diamond was never worn.

But Ryan was unaware of the change. He placed the ring in a safe deposit box where it remained for 20 years. Then—on his daughter Margaret's twenty-first birthday he gave her the ring.

When she sent the diamond to a Seattle jeweler for cleaning, she learned of the fraud. Margaret, now Mrs. William F. Miller, put the ring away and has not worn it.

Now, she says, the ring will be presented to her nine-month-old daughter on her twenty-first birthday.

Diver Foresees Treasure Ships Giving Up Gold

MIAMI BEACH, FLA. — A fortune of $70,000,000 in silver and gold lies buried along the Silver shoals in the Caribbean sea, where Spanish galleons were wrecked in 1642, believes Capt. John D. Craig, diver and sea photographer.

Addressing the committee of 100 here, Craig said he believed that some day most of the gold and silver would be recovered. He returned recently from an expedition in the region south of Puerto Rico, where the huge fortune is believed to be located.

"We failed to find any trace of the lost treasure, but we did find some of the cannon off the wrecked galleons," he said. "Some day divers may recover that buried fortune."

Craig told of his experiences filming underwater pictures in the Caribbean, where sharks and other dangerous fish abound.

He described how his crew of men fought sharks by letting air out through the sleeves of their diving suits. Bubbles would ripple out, frightening the sharks, he said.

Old Hospital Bill Paid To Assuage Conscience

WATERLOO, N. Y. — Mrs. Alice M. Yaw, Waterloo Memorial hospital superintendent, exhibits a faded slip of paper and a $2 bill as proof that most hospital patients believe honesty the best policy.

The currency, she said, came from a man who walked into her office and stated he wished to pay an eight-year-old bill. The man was injured on Memorial day, 1932, at the local race track and after being treated at the hospital, left without settling the small bill.

"I've come a long way to pay this bill," the man said, "but I feel a lot better now."

Boy Deposits Stolen $85 And Escapes Sentence

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — Seventeen-year-old William Onorato received a deferred sentence in Superior court for stealing $85 from a market when Judge G. Frederick Frost discovered the youth had banked the money and then returned it.

"I want to commend you for your thrift," Judge Frost said. "There must be something to build on when a young man will start a bank account."

Three Men Are Reunited In Court After 11 Years

BALBOA, CALIF. — Eleven years ago, three young men were fellow workers and friends at a big ballroom here. Recently they met again—in court. One was judge, one was the arresting officer, the third was the culprit, charged with taking a radio antenna from a police car. The judge gave his old friend a suspended sentence.

Origins of Cattle Brands

Probably most of the stories about the origins of the 1,500,000 cattle brands registered in the West are legends. One such outstanding tale, still told and published as a true story, is that Burk Burnett adopted the famous brand "6666" in 1900 because he won his great Texas ranch in a poker game with a hand containing four sixes.—Collier's.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Should Germany conquer England, take a look at the Articles of Confederation, drafted by the Founding Fathers of the United States in 1777. You will find, say Pearson and Allen, Washington columnists, a paragraph giving specific legal precedent for Canada seeking admittance as a member of the United States. The Founding Fathers opened the door in long-forgotten Article II as follows:

"Canada acceding to this Confederation, and joining in the measures of the United States, shall be admitted into, and entitled to all the advantages of this Union. But no other Colony shall be admitted into the same unless such admission be agreed to by nine states."

According to this, it would appear that Canada could become a part of the United States without a referendum vote by the other 48 states.

At the foot of the stairs, Norwood pulled out his cardcase, produced a card and gave it to one of the palace servants:

"Send that up to Miss Lynn Harding. Say I will be waiting outside. I will meet her near the front steps."

He walked out. Under the glare of the portico light he pulled out his handkerchief, raised his right arm and waved it.

O'Leary's shrill whistle answered: long-short, long-short—"Order received and executed—okay!"

O'Leary had released the Bengali doctor.

CHAPTER XXII

Lynn looked like a ghost in white chiffon. She turned instinctively to the right and stepped into the darkness. She stood within a few paces of the spot where, one night ago, she had bridled at Norwood's blunt comments. It seemed as if a whole lifetime had passed in the interval. The guitar and the songs on the wall were a far-off memory.

Norwood strode out of the darkness. "Silence!" he said. "Not a word. Nothing so easy on the nerves as saying nothing."

They continued walking until they came to a moonlit lotus pond and stood together staring at the reflections of trees. A little animal jumped into the water and swam. They watched the ripples spread until they reached the marble banks. At last Norwood spoke:

"Feeling better?"

"I can't analyze it. I suppose I'm feeling guilty."

"Want some more silence?"

"No. I would rather you'd say what you think."

Norwood chuckled: "You remember the parrot. I draw extra pay for thinking and not talking. I have only one virtue."

"You say only one virtue? What is it?"

"I never use double meanings."

"Are you telling the truth?"

"Yes."

"Good. Then please say what you think of me, straight, without any double meanings or reservations. Let's get that over with."

"Very well, Lynn. But are you quite sure you won't be belligerent about it? I didn't bring you out here to start a fight."

It wasn't the first time he had called her Lynn, but she noticed it. When Rundhia first called her Lynn she actually hadn't noticed it.

"I never am belligerent," she answered.

"No? What a pity. Of course, I don't expect to be shot but I don't even want to make you really angry. You're a bit angry now, aren't you?"

"Yes, but with myself. I'm not angry with you. Go ahead, punish me. I'll take it. Say what you think."

"Do you promise you won't hit back, or make a scene, or accuse me of hidden motives?"

"Captain Norwood, kindly go ahead and tell me. I've treated you very badly and you're entitled to revenge. I will listen. And won't answer back."

"Don't promise."

"Say what you think," she insisted.

"I think the same now that I did when I first saw you."

"What is it?"

"Perhaps I'm not being quite accurate. It wasn't until that astonishing picnic at the palace that I made up my mind to marry you. I fell in love with you at first sight, without guessing who you were, when I saw you with the Maharanee in the carriage. When I saw you on horseback in the early morning, it was all over as far as I'm concerned—nothing further to argue about. I've committed myself to the hilt. How about you?"

Lynn caught her breath. "I—I never dreamt of it!"

"I know you didn't. And you're not dreaming now. We're both of us stone-cold sober and wide awake."

"Do you always make love like this?"

"I don't even know the first rules of the game. I'm a chronic bachelor, suddenly converted."

"But Captain Norwood—"

"The only girl I ever fell in love with calls me Carl or else calls the police."

"But—" Lynn laughed. "Are there any police?"

"Try. Shout for them. An Indian night is as full of eyes as the sky is of stars."

"But I wouldn't know what to say to the police. I'd better call you Carl."

"And now to use one of your phrases, let's get this over with: I'm a pauper. I've four hundred pounds a year and an Engineer Captain's pay."

"Carl, I hope you don't think I'm wealthy. I haven't a cent in the world. I've been disinherited."

"You have? Is that an actual fact?"

"Yes. Auntie hasn't even left me a reputation."

That's marvelous! Oh, my God, what luxury! I was scared stiff."

"You? Scared?"

"Yes. Scared of you. Afraid you'd think I was after your money."

"Carl, I haven't a cent."

"All right. More preliminaries. Mostly I live in a tent. My servants are scandalous rogues, who know nearly as much as I do about crime and treachery and worse."

Lynn laughed: I never lived in a tent, and I've been kept away from sinners. I'm a very ignorant person. You'd better think again, hadn't you?"

"No. I've finished thinking about that. But how about you? It's your last chance. Lynn, you're on the edge of the abyss of matrimony. Any questions?"

"Millions of questions! Billions! I don't even know you. I'll ask them afterwards."

"Good. That's the style. There'll be lots of time afterwards. Well, you've refused to call the police, and you've promised not to talk back or make a scene. So I'll be damned if I'll wait any longer. Lynn, I love you."

The Indian night and the Indian stars; the perfumed silence and the moonlit lotus pool all merged into a consciousness of love—one moment of eternity that swept away the past—one moment of unselfconscious mystery in which the lover and the loved were one and all life was their realm, all values were in true perspective. Love was real. Everything else was illusion and unreal. Until gradually, even in Carl Norwood's arms, Lynn's awareness of earth resumed its spell and she looked away at their reflections in the moonlit lotus pond.

Lynn looked like a ghost in white chiffon.

"Look, Carl. See us! Look."

"Shadows." Then he spoke strangely: "Shadows of reflections that reflect what? You and I are shadows. We move in response to something else. What is it?"

"Carl are you real? Is that you talking?"

"I suspect it's the real me talking to the real you. Lynn, I'm steeped in eastern thought. Life's good. We're growing—getting wiser gradually. That's why I spared Rundhia. He'd have been hanged if I hadn't done what I did. Now he'll get some money from the Maharanee and live in Europe."

"But Carl—" Lynn hesitated.

"Perhaps I shouldn't say it."

"All right, I'll say it for you. He'll go to Europe and do it again. And blots of women won't have sense enough to stand him off until he's ruined them and sneered and gone."

"Yes, I was thinking of that. It was a mean thought."

"No, it wasn't."

"The way I thought it, it was mean. Carl, I believe you because I can't disbelieve you, not for any other reason. It seems impossible. How can such a man as you are, with such thoughts as you think, possibly love me? I believe I deliberately tempted Rundhia. The Maharanee—"

Norwood chuckled. "All right, I'll say that for you, too. She said he really loved you. He'd be a fool if he didn't. The trouble is, he is a fool. So it won't last. Not that it makes any difference."

"But if I've made him wretched—"

"That's his business. Each of us pays for his own mistakes."

"But that was my mistake."

"Your end of it was yours. But you paid cash. Rundhia doesn't. He lets the bill run at compound interest. Everybody makes mistakes. Nobody's worth a damn who hasn't made 'em."

"Bad ones?"

"The worse the better. The rule is, learn and don't repeat. On that condition there's no aftermath. You pay once and that's all."

"Carl, do you mean that a person's past isn't—"

Norwood laughed: "Sink of iniquity, Lynn, unchastened Jezebel, come to think of it, I left your past history seated on a trunk on the path outside the guesthouse. What with the mosquitoes and her temper she'll be cooking up a future unless we go to her rescue."

"Carl, I'm shameless. I really am. I'd forgotten Auntie."

"Did you ever have toothache? One forgets that, too, afterwards."

"But this isn't afterwards. You don't know Auntie. Carl, I'll go to her. You mustn't come. Please, really, you mustn't. She will say things that I don't want you to hear. They're not true but she'll say them."

"Are you sure?"

"You mean, am I sure they're not true?"

"I mean, are you sure she'll say them?"

"Yes. She always does when she's angry."

"Let's find out."

"Carl, I'm—"

"You're embarrassed. So'm I. It's good for both of us, so let's do it together."

They took their time, strolling along shadowy moonlit paths toward the guesthouse, too interested in each other to notice voices until they were quite close up beneath the darkness of the overhanging trees.

The trunks no longer stood in a row on the garden path. There was a light in the servants' pantry at the rear, and a smell of cooking. Light poured through the living-room window.

"Hush," said Norwood. "Listen. Rule number one is don't talk in the dark. Rule number two is listen and learn, but never tell tales."

The Maharanee's voice came quite distinctly through the open window: "If I, who am broken-hearted, can forgive my nephew Rundhia—"

An unmistakable voice interrupted: "You're being silly. Don't be sentimental. You probably ruined Rundhia by being sentimental. At your age you ought to know better. You should have spanked him when he was young, and kept him short of pocket money when he was older. I neglected to spank Lynn. That's the trouble and I'm ashamed of myself. Are you sure you know where she is? Are you quite sure? Who told you she is near the lotus pond with Captain Norwood?"

"Six servants," said the Maharanee, "and one gardener. Also the Chief of Police very kindly took the trouble to phone me about it."

"Imagine the impudence of that girl!"

"But I haven't noticed that she is impudent."

"If she was in love with Captain Norwood she should have told me."

"Do you think she knew it?" asked the Maharanee. "I knew it, late this evening. But do you think that Lynn knew it?"

Auntie Harding cackled a chairwoman's ladylike laugh on two notes, politely derisive:

"Knew it? Maharanee, what this younger generation knows is more than you and I ever will know. They're incorrigible. That girl has more whalebone in her will than there are cents in a dollar. It isn't brittle. You can't break it. It's resilient."

"Yes," said the Maharanee, "this generation has its own ideas. It goes its own way. Lynn will go far."

Auntie coughed drily: "Go far? She will go to the devil, I don't doubt. But I have this consolation. If what you say is true, she has disgraced herself with the only gentleman I have met in India."

The Maharanee protested loyally: "His Highness my husband—"

"Oh, kings don't count," said Auntie. "They're middle class nowadays. I can't forgive kings for the way they've sold out to the politicians. I never will forgive them. I'm a Democrat and I'll die in my boots."

"But you'll forgive Lynn?"

"Getting back at me, are you? A little sarcasm, eh? Maharanee, if I can get that minx Lynn to forgive me before she has had time to slander me to Captain Norwood, I'll think I'm lucky. I'll be a wizard—or is it a witch?"

"Or are you a little wiser than you were?" the Maharanee suggested.

Norwood whispered: "How much did you bet? Are you still scared?"

Moses Lafayette O'Leary's whistle piped from the nearby shrubbery a few notes of a private signal: C, D, F—C, D, F—C, D, F—C. It startled Lynn.

"What was that? It sounded like someone in hiding. Are we being watched?"

"Yes, the night has eyes in India. They're a saying here that even diamonds see in the dark. That's a very rough diamond informing me that all's clear and he's off home. You go in. I'll follow you presently. I want to speak to him."

Norwood walked alone into the shrubbery. He almost walked into Moses O'Leary.

"I warned you," said O'Leary, "about women. By the hundred they're all right. One's a problem. But you wouldn't listen. I suppose you'll get yourself a new man now, to say yes to you and tell you you're Solomon. But Solomon had him a thousand wives, and concubines on top of that. So put that in your pipe and smoke it. Am I out of a job?"

"Where's your horse?"

"Tain't a horse. I rode your baby mare. She's near the gate."

"When you get back to camp see that she's rubbed down carefully and give her a light blanket. Stand by and see it done. Do you hear me?"

"Yes, sir, Captain Norwood."

"Here's the key to the whiskey. Help yourself. You've leave of absence until noon tomorrow. Turn up sober or I'll—"

"Is the Government broke?"

"Here are ten rupees. But that's not Government money. It's personal. Don't get into trouble with it."

"Well, sir, I've seen miracles in my day. I've seen you pick winners. Maybe she's as reliable as she is good looking. Here's hoping. I'll say a prayer for you."

"Don't keep that mare standing. Good night."

"Good night, sir, and here's hoping."

Moses Lafayette O'Leary strode away into the night, until the sound of his footfall ceased on the dusty path and there was nothing more heard of him but the tune that he whistled:

Oh, officers' wives get puddings and pies
And soups and roasts and jellies,
But poor Tommies' wives get sweet—

MALACHI DEMANDS HONESTY TOWARD GOD

LESSON TEXT—Malachi 3:7-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me how herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.—Malachi 3:10.

Spiritually sick—and desperately so—was Israel in the days of Malachi. The nation had been released from captivity in Babylon and had been back in their own land for almost a century. The outburst of religious enthusiasm which characterized their return had resulted in the rebuilding of the temple (Ezra 1:1-4). In this they were encouraged by Haggai, as we recall from our lesson of last Sunday. They had later been led by Nehemiah in renewed interest in spiritual things and in the rebuilding of the city wall, but now again they had turned away from God. Malachi came with what one might call God's last word before judgment upon their sins. The lesson centers around four words.

I. Apostasy.

"Ye have turned aside" (v. 7, R. V.). This was God's complaint against His people. In spite of His blessings upon them, they had intermarried with the heathen, they had dealt treacherously with their brethren, and had neglected to worship God. What was even worse, they felt no conviction about their sin and denied that they owed God anything, not even the debt of common gratitude.

Read the insolent, self-confident questions and assertions of the people in verses 7, 8, 13 and 14. Think how perfectly they fit the attitude of thousands of unbelievers and backslidden Christians in our day. One might almost think that Malachi were reading the secret thoughts of our own people, and possibly of our own hearts.

II. Robbery.

Illness commonly has its center of infection, whether it be physical or spiritual sickness. Malachi struck at a very vital point when he revealed that the heart of Israel's difficulty was dishonesty toward God.

That dishonesty reflected itself in spiritual things, but, since Malachi was talking to an arguing generation (just like ours), he gave them a concrete illustration of their deceit—they had withheld from God the tithes and offerings.

Men who would never cheat the telephone company out of a nickel will rob God consistently Sunday after Sunday by sanctimoniously slipping a thin dime into the collection plate. If that is all a man can and should give, God will bless it and multiply it for His glory. But certainly it does not befit one who lives in luxury to give God's work the smallest piece of change which he can decently slip into the plate.

Tithe may be said to be an Old Testament principle. Doubtless it is also true that the principle of New Testament Christianity is that all we have belongs to God, but often the one who hides behind that fact does not give as much as the people of Old Testament times. Is that honest?

III. Judgment.

God is love, but that does not mean that His patience is without limit nor that He will forever withhold judgment. He says, through Malachi (v. 9), "Ye are cursed with a curse." The blessing has been withheld (v. 10). The devourer is in the land (v. 11). He promised them release and blessing if they repented and returned to the right way, which obviously means that their failure to do so would bring judgment. We know that Israel despised God's warning and to this day is paying for its sin. Will America be wise enough to heed God's call?

IV. Blessing.

So often the loving God had to speak through His prophets of impending judgment on sin, but how gracious He is in that He always holds out the promise of blessing for repentance and obedience.

Look at the precious promise in verse 10. Thousands of Christians join the writer in saying, "That is true in A. D. 1940 just as it was in 400 B. C." Read verses 11 and 12. Note that our God is not only a great God, but a good God. Consider the blessings of spiritual fellowship—the certainty of victory revealed in verses 16 and 17. One marvels that Israel could resist such a loving plea just as one wonders also why men of our own day of God's grace still resist His gracious invitation.

A Helpful Heart

It is a fine thing to do kindly, helpful deeds. It is one of the very finest in the world. But there is something finer than the helpful hand; it is the helpful heart.

Velveteen Frames For Your Pictures

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

DO YOU remember Miss Fixit who, a week or so ago in one of these articles, made over an old rocker? Today's sketch shows how she used that chair at her desk. The full description of the transformation of the chair is in Sewing Book 5, which is offered here for the first time. This new book contains 32 pages of helpful ideas for homemakers and is available to readers of this paper for 10 cents in coin to cover cost and mailing.

Miss Fixit painted an old desk blue to match her chair. She had some enlarged snapshots that she wanted to hang over the desk but she also wanted to repeat the blue color and some of the red in the chintz used for the chair. So, she decided to make blue velveteen frames for the pictures and then hang them with red ribbon. The diagrams show you exactly how the frames were made.

Betsy, who also streamlined an old iron bed, which she found in the attic, will be with us again next week with more "attic magic." Meanwhile better send your order for your copy of Sewing Book 5 to:

Polar Foods

When in polar regions, explorers require about three times as many calories as when in temperate climates. As they cannot consume this quantity of solid food, an appreciable part of their diet is in concentrated and pre-cooked form.

One of the newest of these foods contains 22 ingredients: Pemican, beef liver, vegetable oil, seven vegetables, four cereals, four condiments, milk powder, malt, yeast, and calcium salts.—Collier's.

"MIDDLE AGE" WOMEN

Thousands have gone smiling thru this "trying time" by taking Pinkham's—famous for helping female functions. Try it! LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Education's Aim

Education has for its object the formation of character.—Herbert Spencer.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Not on the Surface

He who would search for pearls must dive below.—Dryden.

KILL ALL FLIES

Bureau of Standards

A BUSINESS organization which wants to get the most for the money sets up standards by which to judge what is offered to it, just as in Washington the government maintains a Bureau of Standards. You can have your own Bureau of Standards, too. Just consult the advertising columns of your newspaper. They safeguard your purchasing power every day of every year.

New Viaduct Dedication Sunday

A mile long parade will precede the dedication Sunday June 23, of the $475,000 steel and concrete viaduct which extends 2,062 feet over the Rock Island Railway Lines on Burr Oak Ave., (127th St.) The bridge provides a new link for east and west bound arterial highways in South Cook county.

The new four lane structure, replaces a narrow wooden bridge which was closed to traffic in December 1936.

The parade scheduled for 2:30 will proceed north on Western Ave., from Broadway in Blue Island to Burr Oak Ave., then east to the center of the viaduct. Police Lt. Rich. E. Sorgenfrei of Blue Island is marshal. There will be three bands, numerous floats and marching units. The band will be headed by the Blue Island Am. Legion Drum and Bugle Corps. A speaker's stand will be erected in the center of the viaduct where a ribbon will be stretched across the span. Scissors and ribbons for this part of the ceremony are being furnished by the Third Ward Improvement Club and the Italian Am. Citizens Club of Blue Island. The Blue Island Liederkreis will sing. Joseph Cooke, Harvey Publisher, will be Master of Ceremonies.

Clayton F. Smith Pres. of Cook County Board has been invited to be the principal speaker. Mayor J. M. Hart of Blue Island will express his city's appreciation of this improvement which again joins that city's east side to its west side.

Many other noted men of the County and Railroad will be present.

The Tinley Park Post of the American Legion met Tuesday night. The Legion Post is actively planning for the carnival the Post will sponsor in August.

Wm. Funk is erecting another brick building adjoining the bakery. It is understood that Joe Greco is to open a barber shop in the new building.

Ask For More Millions For War Relief

In connection with the $50,000,000 European relief appropriation now pending before Congress, Chairman Norman H. Davis notified the 3,700 Red Cross chapters that "The bill before Congress for $50,000,000 for the purchase of surplus food and other supplies for the relief of refugees, does not provide for any appropriation to the Red Cross of any money. The Government is not to finance the Red Cross and the later does not ask it to. The Red Cross has been and is expecting to continue to be an organization supported by voluntary gifts. The proposed legislation provides that the purchases shall be under the control of the President, but he may select as the agency for the distribution of the foods etc., the American Red Cross or others."

Tax Collections In Cook County

The final total of 1939 tax collections under the June 1, penalty date is $96,720,000, County Treasurer John Toman reported today. This is an increase of $3,120,000 over the corresponding period last year. Collections by County Town collectors, are still to be heard from says the Treasurer, and when those collections are accounted for, Toman believes the 1939 collections will go well over $100,000,000.

Toman says this is a record, considering that thousands of taxpayers this year paid only the first installment, whereas last year many paid both installments in the June collections.

Only twenty dollars of counterfeit money showed up and this was detected by his cashiers. Not a cent was lost to the county.

July 1st finds another month for delinquents and the penalty on that day will go to two 2 per cent.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 23.

The Golden Text was, "Lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, The Lord, The God of hosts, is his name" (Amos 4:13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thus saith God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein: I am the Lord: that is my name: and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images" (Isaiah 42:5, 8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true theory of the universe, including man, is not in material history but in spiritual development. Inspired thought relinquishes a material, sensual, and mortal theory of the universe, and adopts the spiritual and immortal" (p. 547).

BOOTS, BOOTS, BOOTS!

Mokena Civic Ass'n. Closes Two Very Eventful Years

"We sponsored the immunizing of children in this community to which the public responded favorably and thru our efforts the cost was considerably reduced.

"After considerable delay and effort we have now found a new location for the skating rink which work is now assured and should be completed shortly to the advantage of the community.

"We sponsored a Boy and Girl Scout Troop, secured their charter for them, presented each unit with an American flag and donated to them a scout library. Both of these troops have grown remarkably and have already added auxiliary units, are under splendid leadership and should continue to function favorably and well. We also entertained both units at the Winter Circus in Chicago. Many of these boys and girls had never seen one, so you may best judge for yourselves, how they appreciated this entertainment.

"Thru our efforts the community is now receiving the benefit of improved and additional train service.

"The Variety Show was very well attended and a financial success and a diversion from the usual form of entertainment.

"During the year we also showed several educational films after our regular meetings. We further worked out to a successful conclusion problems to the benefit of the community. Interest in some has gone unnoticed, others receiving favorable comment. You have been officially represented on many occasions, wherever necessary either by your officers or committee chairmen.

"We sponsored the annual community Christmas Tree holding a suitable program commensurate with the Xmas spirit. We have had a slight increase in membership during the year. The monthly meetings have been well attended and well above expectations.

"In spite of quite liberal spending and donations our financial position is still favorable. Our cash and physical assets amount to approximately $350.00.

"Your community spirit, individually and collectively has manifested itself on many occasions, both in thought and action, plus your ideas for the future are why you function as a Civic Association. It is therefore my belief, that your conduct and interest in the affairs of the community warrant the continued confidence of the community, for you have been ever ready and willing to serve it, without the hope of fee or reward.

"This then, gentlemen, is the final accounting of my stewardship. It has been a pleasure to have served you. The warm friendships formed, I shall always cherish and associate with pleasant memories. If I have failed in my assignment, may I ask you to be charitable and make deductions for human fallacies. You not only twice honored me by choosing me president of this association, but you went farther than that by amplifying it with loyal support, courtesy, kindly co-operation and in each and every way doing your part of the work and assuming full responsibilities, for all of which, to each and everyone of you my grateful thanks.

"Finally, to my successor in office, may I wish a like consideration, my congratulations and my best wishes for his and this Association's continued success."

MOKENA

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Robert N. Marti.

Time speeds on—nine years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast

And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will—
His vacant place there is none can fill.

Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in Heaven we will meet again.

MR. AND MRS. I. D. MARTI
AND FAMILY

Three Sunday School Classes of the Mokena Methodist church with their teachers, Mrs. Roy Erdman, Miss Adeline Semmler and Mr. John Fox gave a wienie roast at the Hickory Creek woods Saturday afternoon. Swimming was enjoyed by some. The group hiked to the woods and back. Everyone had a grand time and enjoyed plenty of good eats.

The book of the month club met with Mrs. Donald Ambuhl, June 14. Twelve members were present. A book review was given by Mrs. John Fox on "Oh, Promised Land" by James Street. The next meeting will be on Friday, July 12. A review is to be given.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Deadmore of Joliet and the Semmler family enjoyed an automobile trip to Wadsworth, Indiana Sunday. They visited with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Weinhold and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Weinhold. The day was exceedingly warm, the thermometer registering 94. Crops look fine. Corn will be more than knee high by the 4th of July. The route followed was thru Goodland and Kentland, Indiana, which is excellent farming territory. Copious rains have fallen in that section the past week.

Mr. Fred Hentsch of Minooka, well known in this section, will celebrate his 75th birthday anniversary next Sunday and Monday, June 23 and 24. Open house will be in order for all relatives and friends who are cordially invited to attend the affair.

Herbert Bruns who has been confined to bed for the past few weeks is showing some improvement.

The interior of the R. A. Bechstein residence is being remodeled. Christie Fink of Frankfort is doing the carpenter work.

Sunday afternoon pictures were taken at the Mokena school grounds of the heads of the committees and of the band associations sponsoring the 4th annual picnic of the combined bands of Mokena, Frankfort and Tinley Park which will be held in the Frankfort Grove, Sunday afternoon and evening, June 30.

Those appearing in the pictures were Herbert Lambrecht, Frankfort, general chairman; Arthur Lambrecht, head of entertainment committee; Walter Weichbrodt, president of the Frankfort Band Association; Harry Sluiter, president of the Tinley Park Band Association; I. D. Marti, president of the Mokena Band Association; Wm. Wannemacher, chairman of the finance committee and Mrs. Florence Steele, chairman of the publicity committee.

These are thriving on many vacant lots and if not cut before they go to seed, there will be a still bigger crop next year.

Mrs. Mary Barenz who recently underwent a major operation is improving.

Donna Bueschell is spending her vacation with relatives in South Chicago.

The Mokena Girl Scout leaders attended a Leader's picnic at Highland Park in Joliet last Tuesday. Mrs. A. Cappel, Miss Ada Semmler of Mokena and Mrs. Earl Ferguson of Joliet attended. They report a very pleasant time and gained much scout information.

Many Mokena friends attended the 50th wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith in their home in Orland last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Spiess and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lauffer motored to Green Bay, Wis., last week. They had a very enjoyable trip.

Miss Dorothy Hall, of the Nursing School at Silver Cross hospital, spent Sunday in her home here.

CAMPING DAYS AHEAD FOR COUNTY 4-H CLUB GIRLS

Will County 4-H club girls are going to have another chance to go camping as a part of their club activities this summer as plans go forward for a four-day camp at Camp Rotary at Rockford, Ill., from July 4 to 7, according to Edith Huffman, Home Adviser.

The Camp is being sponsored jointly with 10 other northern Illinois counties. Last year 28 girls from the county went camping. Registration for this year's camp opened this week and a quota of 25 has been assigned to the county.

Nine Home Advisers from the counties as well as help from the state extension service have each of the camp features and they will be assisted by 4-H leaders from the county. It is expected that about 210 will attend. Handicraft, swiming, photography, news writing for camp paper and discussions on being an ideal hostess are being included in the program, as well as hiking, sports, music and games.

Camping is one of the many activities which the extension service of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture sponsors as a part of its program to make rural life more attractive and to give thousands of 4-H club members in the state training in better farming and homemaking practices.

Mrs. O'Neill Reports On Special Session

The session was called primarily to make it possible for the state to benefit from Federal grants for Old Age Assistance. This bill was passed at the regular session of both houses and vetoed by the Governor because of mistaken information given him that Washington would not meet the requirements of our bill. In other words, Illinois will add $5 per month to the Old Age benefits, with fifty per cent of the amount supplied by the government. The ceiling so called will be forty instead of thirty dollars per month as now. This does not mean that everyone will get forty dollars. It is still the Old Age Assistance and the state will add to all other possible resources of the recipient enough to make forty instead of thirty. Two and a half dollars of this comes from Illinois and the other two and a half dollars from the Federal funds. The act has been further liberalized by abating all pending suits against estates of deceased recipients. It also places blind persons who are eligible for Old Age Assistance and are not receiving a blind pension in line for Old Age Assistance. Of course when the county and state grant blind pension all aid from the Old Age act ceases. Another liberalizing feature of the new act provides that necessary medical, surgical and hospital aid shall be granted in addition to the regular Old Age Assistance. This bill has passed both houses and is now waiting for signature of the Governor.

Workmen's Compensation Act was amended. This amendment was agreed between the employers and the Illinois Federation of Labor. The one feature of this program which caused some friction was the fact that the insurance agents wished to have it amended to exclude them from the provisions of same to accord with the Federal act. As I have said this was an agreed bill and the labor people and employer groups sat in some time previously and perfected the agreed changes which did not contemplate the insurance amendment. For this reason they opposed other amendments from the floor. The amendment was presented but did not get enough votes. The writer assured the insurance people of her vote for them and acted accordingly, but the majority was against adopting any amendments other than agreed upon in the conference. This matter will come up in January I understand.

Several validating acts were passed. For the uninitiated this means that the law is changed so that mistakes that have been made by local officials which have made invalid their attempts to bring about certain objects for their community may be overcome and their objective obtained in spite of the mistakes. Some times a validating bill is meritorious and some times not. In this session school districts for the most part were affected and it seemed right to help them.

Attempts were made to place a tax on oil but the speaker refused to permit the bill to be called in as much as he had said no further taxes were to be levied in this session. It was thought that money could be found to meet the additional needs of the Old Age Assistance Act by cutting down expenses of state government. In an effort to find out where this could be done hearings were held by the Committee made up of Democrats and Republicans. Some department heads were most cooperative and by cutting down on some contributions toward this end while others took the conduct of their department as a matter of their own personal concern and spent their efforts in trying to annoy the committee and evade the facts as to their payrolls and other costs of government under their supervision. Some funds were extracted in this way by the committee and the wholesome principle that two party government is safest was demonstrated.

The writer introduced and secured passage in the House of a Resolution memorializing or calling upon Congress to remain in session during the critical period of erection of further national defense. Copies will be sent to all Illinois Congressmen, senators, presidents of National Senate and House of Representatives and to the President. Such resolutions are only effective as expressing the will of the people thru their elected representatives in Springfield. In other words, they are merely advisory as to the public sentiment in that area. I believe that the majority of the of the people of the country feel that in such a time as this the legislative branch of the government should remain in position to have a voice in government as well as the executive branch or any one man.

One matter of interest to the people of the state is the fact that the Governor of the state is without any doubt unable to function as the chief executive. There seems to be no provision by which the Lieutenant Governor can assume the duties of the office in as much as those surrounding the Governor will not admit that he is unable to function and he must be officially declared disabled or out of the state before the Lieutenant Governor may step in. This has caused much concern to the people and also much friction in the Democratic party. The Republicans seem to have taken the position that this is a problem for the Democrats to handle in as much as they are in complete control except for the lower branch of the legislature. In another six months the matter will be adjusted in regular and orderly manner and until that time things will probably remain as they are unless the Governor's organization sees fit to change it.

LOTTIE HOLMAN O'NEILL

Democrats Branded As War Party

Illinois Republicans, at their state convention in Springfield last Friday, unanimously branded the Democratic party as the party of Internationalism and war. As the climax to a 19-point platform, the Republicans definitely opposed America's meddling in European affairs but at the same time they demanded adequate defense to protect the United States from any aggressor nation.

In one of the most harmonious political sessions ever held in Illinois, the thousands of delegates and party workers pledged their united support of the entire Republican ticket. The party's platform which was adopted unanimously, presents a positive stand on every important issue.

The plank on defense and war follows:

"The Republican Party stands for Americanism and peace." "The Democratic party stands for Internationalism and war."

"We demand, as we have demanded an adequate national defense to protect the United States but we insist that not one drop of blood of America's youth shall be spilled on a foreign shore for the purpose of interfering in any European or Asiatic conflict."

Fifth column activities were condemned and the charge was made that "high officials in Washington" have been encouraging these activities.

"We advocate drastic and immediate measures to exterminate all such subversive influences," the plank reads and continues with a pledge to enact laws requiring American citizenship as a pre-requisite to the issuing of licenses for the practices of the various professions and trades licensed by the state.

The platform condemns Democratic extravagance and "tremendous increase in taxes," and pledges the party when returned to power, to remove the sales tax from food, eliminate lump sum appropriations, restore "free and open bidding" in the letting of state contracts, in short, the entire operation of state government will be put on a sound basis."

Among other subjects covered by the platform are: Pardons and paroles, Civil service, Elections, Employment and Labor Relief, Old Age Assistance, Agriculture, Education, War Veterans, Conservation, Women and Home Rule.

Dividend Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you the kind of printing that will prove it. Let us show it to you.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

TRADE MARKS AND DOLLAR MARKS

WITHOUT giving the matter much thought you might define a trade mark on a package or an advertisement as a mark of identification which protects the interest of the seller against imitators; a selfish symbol, you know, which exists to help some one man or firm to get rich.

Actually a trade mark is as much to your interest as it is to the man's who owns it and has it registered in his name.

For it is a buying guide for you which you can absolutely trust. You can buy anything under a trade mark and know that the quality, the quantity and the price will be right. You do not even have to examine the package before you buy. If the trade mark is there, so also will the quality be there.

The merchant knows that. He prefers to sell trade-marked, that is, advertised, goods, because they have the confidence of the public and can be sold easily, quickly and in quantity.

Back of the trade mark is advertising. It stands for the trade mark, for the trade mark itself is merely a design etched on paper, until advertising gives it life in the minds of consumers like yourself.

The trade mark which saves you money and time need not be a formal design of a national manufacturer or advertiser. It may be merely the familiar name of your grocer or haberdasher, appearing at the foot of his advertisements in the newspaper.

Wherever you see those familiar words or names or marks you know that you are in the presence of a man who is doing his level best to be worthy of your trade and who wants to keep you coming back.

He is advertising for that purpose, notifying you that he is in business to stay and that you can buy from him and he will stand back of his goods. For you the trade mark, like the dollar mark which we all respect, stands for full value wherever it happens to be found.

But unidentified goods are as uncertain as counterfeit money, and the wise man or woman avoids both.

And how close these trade marks are to our lives and how comforting they are to us when we buy! You go into a store. On the shelves are familiar marks you have seen all your life.

You recognize them as you do familiar faces in a strange crowd—and they give you the same comforting feeling of familiarity and respect.

Trade marks exist to help you buy more serenely and profitably.

A TEA IN THE TIME OF ROSES
(See Recipes Below)

Household News By Eleanor Howe

It's the custom, in a great many clubs, to draw the season to a graceful close with a charming spring tea. If you're chairman of the refreshment committee for that delightful social function of your organization, why not plan to make "In the Time of Roses" the theme song for your tea?

Use roses here, there and everywhere . . . a rose-pink damask cloth with rose pattern; rose-sprigged china; a great bowl of real roses for the centerpiece, and candied rose petals to decorate the tiny cakes.

When you plan the refreshments, allow at least three sandwiches and two little cakes (or cookies) for each guest, and a pound of mints or salted nuts for each 25 guests. If the tea is a large one, you'll need two platters of sandwiches, two of cakes and one dish each of mints and nuts, on the table at one time, and make sure that for each platter on the table there's at least one full one in the kitchen to take its place.

Choose an interesting variety of dainty sandwiches for your tea. Oblong brown bread sandwiches with cream cheese and marmalade are good, and combine effectively with round white bread sandwiches, with a blend of tuna fish and mayonnaise between them. Very thin, dainty slices of an unusual bread are excellent for plain bread and butter sandwiches.

An assortment of dark and light cookies, and very small cakes provide the sweet touch for your menu. And tea you must have, of course.

Tea, when properly made, is one of the most invigorating drinks you can serve. It is most important, especially when making tea for a group, to measure the amount of tea used and to brew it just long enough and not too long in order to insure its best fragrance and tang. (Three to five minutes is generally conceded to be just about right brewing time.)

Warm Climate Slows Pulse, Aids Relaxation

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN asked why he went south every winter for a few weeks, a busy physician answered:

"At home I am busy, am tensed most of the time, and the cool weather stimulates further activity. I know it is good for anyone to keep active mentally and physically, but I'm not as young as I was, and require relaxation. When I go south I am away from my work which, of course, gives some relaxation, but there is something about the weather in the South that makes me content to be idle, to just sit and read, or not even read. I find my pulse is slower and my blood pressure lower in the warm climate."

The rate at which the body processes work would appear to be slower in southern people than in those who live in the North.

In discussing the metabolic rate (rate at which body processes work), Dr. A. G. Eaton, New Orleans, in the Journal of Laboratory and Clinical Medicine, after examining 98 women and 62 men (apparently normal students and teachers of Louisiana State university, New Orleans), states that a new set of standards is necessary. He found that the metabolic rate was about 10 per cent slower in these normal individuals living in the South than those given in textbooks for those living in temperate climates.

As the weather is always "warmer" than in the North, there is a general or prolonged effect upon these individuals. Lessened desire for strenuous exertion and greater ability and desire for relaxation must be considered as probable factors in lowering the metabolic rate. Whatever the cause may be, the lowered heat production lessens the strain on the body's machinery for getting rid of heat and makes life more comfortable in a warm climate, especially hot moist nights when it is so difficult to get rid of heat from the body.

Excitement Chief Cause of Insomnia

IT WOULD seem that the matter of sleep and relaxation is now the subject of much thought and conversation because, during the last few years and at present, more and more individuals are finding it difficult to get "sufficient" sleep.

A study of the sleep habits of 50 women who had recovered from slight mental or behavior disturbances and who did not complain of insomnia, were observed for three months in an observation hospital and reported by Dr. Louis J. Karnosh, Cleveland, in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The period of sleep varied from 6½ to 8 hours. Age, temperament and diet did not seem to influence the amount or degree of sleep.

"On the other hand, excitement due to visits by relatives, arguments or disagreements with other patients or attendants, and holidays with the emotion or excitement which occurs at these times, were definitely to blame for 'breaking' the regular rhythms of sleep."

Mentality 'Can't Take It.'

This shows that it is the nervous or mental side of us that "can't take it" blows or disturbances and not so much the physical disturbances that prevent us from sleeping.

Another fact found, and this same fact has often been found before, is that lack of sleep will not cause severe mental disturbances or insanity. The knowledge that lack of sleep will not cause insanity or serious body disturbances is reassuring to those who fear the terrible consequences of sleeplessness. Further, observations by nurses and physicians all agree that most of us sleep longer than we think, because sleepless hours pass so slowly.

What is the best method of bringing on sleep? A good bed, a quiet room, and muscular relaxation—keeping arms and legs in a half-bent position—are most important.

MOVIES-IN-THE-SLOT

Are the movies going "back where they came from": the nickelodeon, the nicoret and the peepshow?

News from Hollywood so indicates. Dozens of promoters are getting in on a gold rush they think will come with the introduction of movies by slot machines in taverns, barrooms, luncheonettes, ice-cream parlors and poolrooms all over the country.

You drop a nickel in the slot and get a movie show with music. The idea is to flood the country with "movie cabinets" through which a customer may get a movie with his beer, cake, strawberry sundae, three-decker sandwich or hotdog.

Tyrone Power and Deanna Durbin will be presented with a short ale and an onion. Mae West, Eddie Cantor and E. G. Robinson may be obtainable with a cup of java and a plate of beans. Errol Flynn and Kay Francis through the mere deposit of a nickel will become inseparable from a cocktail and a hand of rummy.

You may even get Raymond Massey in a new Lincoln drama at the Seaside Grill.

The new device brings Radio City to Hogan's Elite Cafe, transfers Roxy's to Finnegan's Bar and makes Greta Garbo, bock beer, Mickey Rooney, Gary Cooper, and a game of Kelly pool allied products.

It isn't hard to imagine a fellow rolling into a tavern, pulling out a handful of change and demanding "The Garden of Allah," a sardine sandwich, a rye highball and a couple of short newsreels with ginger-ale.

Jimmy Roosevelt is getting some of the blame. He was among the first to leap into the new idea with both feet. Since that time scores of movie figures are aboard and it is reported that some of the major producers have money in it.

Tremendous returns are predicted, especially if Will Hays doesn't stop such screen revivals as "Fun in a Turkish Bath," "The Bathing Beauties' Ball," "The Boudoir Burglar" and "Parisian Nights"

The whole idea will cheapen pictures, topple the movie industry from the penthouse level to the underground rathskeller and probably throw another rock at the legitimate picture houses. But it's coming.

The pictures are to be limited to three minutes, which is the only good thing that can be said in their favor. Maybe "Gone With the Wind" is to blame. It may be just a normal reaction against four-hour films.

SECRETARY LA GUARDIA

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York has been mentioned as an assistant secretary of war or for some other place in Mr. Roosevelt's emergency cabinet. The very idea is staggering. Fiorello might or might not keep us out of this war, but he would start so many others that we would forget all about the present crisis. We can see him now, assistant secretary of the navy, attired in fire helmet, rubber boots and naval blouse, carrying a fire hose in one hand and a pair of binoculars in the other, ready for all comers.

Mayor LaGuardia is the only man in America who could plan a naval battle, dedicate a viaduct, open a new school, issue an ultimatum to Germany, deliver a talk on kitchen economics, put through an aviation program, throw out a first baseball, denounce the press and lead a tank attack, all in one afternoon.

And, adding one safety feature to another, this new Silvertown is also the only tire that gives you the Golden Ply—the famous Goodrich invention that resists the terrific blowout-causing heat generated inside all tires by today's high speeds. By resisting this internal heat, the Golden Ply protects you against those high-speed blow-outs.

Remember, many tires cost more than Silvertowns; but no other tire—at any price—can give you this two-way protection against skids and blow-outs. Unless you make your next tires Silvertowns, you'll be cheating yourself and your family out of the greatest tire safety ever offered. See us before it's too late.

YOU LOAD IN A HURRY . .

With a McCormick-Deering Cylinder-Rake
 Hay Loader

An efficient haying job is the answer when you use this loader, built to pick up hay from either swath or windrow. One-man loading is possible, reducing labor costs.

The three-bar cylinder is adjustable for different hay conditions. The three-throw crankshaft minimizes jerkiness and elevates the hay steadily and gently, thereby reducing leaf loss.

The sturdy workmanship found in this loader is found in all McCormick-Deering Hay Tools, including the No. 7 enclosed-gear mower, side rakes and tedders, self-dump rakes, sweep rakes, hay stackers, and hay presses. You can see them all at our store now.
